The History of Frankley

[part one] by Eric Carter

The Domesday Book records the manor of Franchlie, whose name derives from the Old English [Franca's Leah] meaning 'Franca's clearing'. This ancient hamlet is centred on Church Hill around the junction of Scotland Lane and Frankley Lane and still nestles in countryside, with Bartley Green and Woodgate to the north and modern Frankley to the south.

Much of the manor lies on the hilly ground of the Sedgley-Northfield Ridge and a fine view can be had from Frankley Hill and Frankley Beeches. It is possible on a clear day to see from here the mountains of the Berwyn Range above Llangollen in north-east Wales some 70 miles away. Cereals and root crops are grown here and there is evidence that flax and hops were cultivated in the past.

The first known underlord of the manor of Frankley was Bernard de Frankley in 1166 when he held it as part of the barony of Dudley. It was very likely that he was descended from one of the followers of William the Conqueror in 1066 and took his name from the manor. Frankley was passed down through his family, sometimes in the female line [whence the surname Lyttleton] until 1299 when the title was sold. However, over 100 years later, Thomas Lyttelton was able to prove that the descent of the manor should pass to him, and the manor again passed down the female line, though the name of Lyttleton was retained. The title remains in the family to this day with Viscount Cobham of Hagley Hall in a decent traceable for over eight centuries.

Frankley Hall stood from at least 1601 west of St Leonard's Church opposite Westminster Farm. At that date it was referred to in parliamentary papers as 'a very fair brick house and in good repair [with] large and sufficient barns, stables, and outhouses'. It replaced an earlier building whose medieval moat is still well preserved. Burned by the Royalists under Prince Rupert during the Civil War on 17 May 1645 to prevent its use as a Parliamentary Garrison, its dressed stones were later used to build the church tower.

Weoley Festival

Following on from the phenomenal success of last year's event, where bumper numbers attended, the event organisers' are hopeful that this year will prove to be an even greater success. The festival will be held Sunday 15th September 1pm-4pm 2013 at Weoley Castle Square's public open space and the best bit is it's FREE

We have lots of exciting Acts booked this year for the popular Community Arena which is always full of talented members from our local clubs and organisations.

On the starting block is a programme of family entertainment including a DJ, singers, line dancers, belly dancers, fire eaters, cheer leaders, majorettes, arts workshops, face painting, sports, dance & history activities along with police and fire displays, rides, bouncy castle, catering and refreshments.

Do you know someone who is consistently fly tipping in your area ????

Then let us know. We treat all calls confidentially

Is your area constantly being used to fly tip rubbish by local residents? This behaviour is not acceptable and we would like to work with residents to ensure that this anti social behaviour ceases immediately.

If you are aware who the perpetrators are, please contact New Frankley in Birmingham Parish Council on 457 9410 or Jackie Easthope [Local Services, Birmingham Housing Dept.] 0121 464 7297 so that enforcement action can be taken.

Lets work together to make Frankley a Greener, Cleaner and Safer Neighbourhood.

Green Bags [recycling]

The practice of putting green bags or other green waste out other than on the collection day is also FLY TIPPING

Frankley's Collection days are Wednesday or Thursday fortnightly so these are the only days when green waste should be outside your homes.
